SAUSAGE MYSTERY

Virginia Mansion Purchased by Bureau of Chemistry Experts Take It Out of Class of Mincement and Hash.

> Did you ever pause to wonder, or perhaps to speculate upon what was in your breakfast sausage? Have you ever meditated upon the elements that brought that clusively satisfy-ing taste in the bologna?

> In the past the contents of packing house sausages have been as full of mystery as the pyramids. They were in a class with mincement and board> ing house hash.

> But it is so no longer. In this day of enlightenment, hygiene, and proteins, some the experts of the Department of Agriculture, to publish to all, not only just what is in the sausage, but how it was prepared and how long it must be cured.

Why and How of Sausages. The experts have laid down the law to sausage makers. They have set it out in detail, and given it to the public, so that no longer need you approach the sausage with a drooling nouth but an apprehensive mind, or as some have done with revolt at the

as some have done with revolutanknown.

Here is the full why and how of sausages, as published in service, and regulatory announcements of the Bureau of Chemistry—promulgated and made binding by law, that all sausage-makers may take heed:

The following methods may be employed in the preparation of sausage containing muscle tissue of pork if of a kind prepared customarily to be eaten without cooking:

Grinding and Stuffing.

1. The sausage meat shall be ground or chopped into pieces not exceeding three-fourths inch in diameter. 'A dry curing mixture containing not less than three and one-third pounds salt to each hundredweight of the unstuffed sausage shall be thoroughly mixed with the ground or chopped meat. After admixture with the salt and other curing materials, and before stuffifing, the ground of chopped sausage meat shall be held at a tempera ture not lower than 34 degrees Fahrenhelt for not less than thirty-six hours.

After stuffing, the sausage shall be held at a temperature not lower than 34 degrees Fahrenheit for an additional period of time sufficient to make a total of not less than 144 hours, or six days, from the time the meat was ground or chopped and the curing materials added. Finally, the sausage shall be smoked for not less than twelve hours. The minimum temperature of the smokehouse during this period at no time shall be lower than 90 degree Fahrenheit; and for four consecutive hours of this period the smokehouse shall be maintained at a temperature not lower than 128 degrees Fahrenheit. The temperature of 128 degrees Fahrenheit shall be attained gradually not less than four hours being occupied in raising the temperature, after the sausage has been placed in the smokehouse, from 90 to 128 degrees Fahrenheit.

Must Have Thermometer.

er than the actual temperature, that it its clockwork runs too fast, that it fails to give a legible record, or that it has any other important defect, its use is to be discontinued until it has been satisfactorily adjusted. In locatin these thermometers precautions should be taken to place them in the coolest portion of the smokehouse, in order that there may be no doubt that all of the sausages have been exposed to the required temperature.

Further Provisions.

2. Sausage which has been ground or chopped and mixed with curing materials as specified in paragraph 1, if not cured and smoked in accordance with the specifications therein given, shall be dried after stuffing, not less than twenty days, at a temperature not lower than 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

3. If sausage containing muscle tissue of pork of a kind prepared customarily to be eaten without cooking is not prepared in accordance with the methods 1 and 2 outlined above, the sausage or the muscle tissue of pork used in its praparation shall be subjected to refrigeration for not less than twenty days at a temperature not higher than 5 degrees Fahrenheit. terials as specified in paragraph 1, if
